FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

2024 SOLAR ECLIPSE TO BE LIVESTREAMED FROM BELLEVILLE

Can't get to Eastern Ontario to watch the Solar Eclipse on April 8th?

Totality on The Bay is coming to Belleville, and the planet. Skywatchers can view the eclipse event, from anywhere in the world, safely, by tuning in to a free video stream on YouTube, live from scenic Meyers Pier overlooking the Bay of Quinte.

The event photographer will take you 360,000 kilometres to the surface of the moon, as it obstructs the sun 148 million kilometres from earth.

Coverage starts at 1:45 pm Eastern Standard Time. The eclipse event begins at 2:08 pm and ends at 4:33 pm. Totality will occur in Belleville at 3:22 pm and lasts for two minutes and four seconds.

The producers of the show will offer multi-camera video coverage of the event with their host, Scott Granville, and special guests. Local enthusiast Keith Sage will join them with his Nikon P1000 camera, capable of giving watchers a close-up view of the eclipse in real time. They'll also have a panoramic view as darkness descends on the Bay of Quinte and Belleville, from a camera mounted on the 35' mast on their remote production van.

To tune in, sign up today at www.youtube.com/@TotalityontheBay. You'll get updates as the date draws closer, and a notification when the show goes live on April 8th!

Scott Granville is the producer and host of Totality on The Bay. Scott's extensive producing and writing career includes creating the popular soccer TV series Direct Kicks, seen on networks such as Rogers Sportsnet, TSN, Fox Sports World, as well as three other nationally broadcast TV series.

Barry Silverthorn is the Technical Producer. He began his career as an assistant video editor. His editing credits include shows about classic cars, guitar collecting, pets, conspiracies, blues music, extreme art, and model trains.
